32. "Blood, Sweat & Tears," Ava Max Albanian-American pop star Ava Max can't help but make catchy songs (see: breakout hit "Sweet But Psycho"). "Bad Guy," Billie Eilish Billie Eilish is arguably 2019's biggest star. "Vossi Bop" is characteristic of what has made him a global hit: creative beats, brilliant rhyme delivery and a sense of fun over it all. (The fact it features Drake doesn't hurt.) But what the song does most unusually is mix and match samples and styles, creating an eclectic track that keeps things interesting — all over a driving, gritty beat. With bouncy percussion and a rollicking, uplifting chorus, it's a perfect workout track: "Bring the big guns out," singer Fletcher insists. "Raising Hell," Kesha feat. Tropicalland and DJ Yuri Martins A heavy hitting squad of Brazilian artists and one American — starring Anitta — came together for the baile funk alchemy that is "Vai Malandra." With its juicy, consistent beat — and lyrics that translate roughly to "go on with your bad self" — it's like a shot of saucy energy straight to your veins. Resonant and soaring, thanks to Houston's powerful voice, it's hard not to feel the brother Finneas, it's dark and quick with a juicy toe-tapping beat that's just right for working out. "Watch me put my war paint on." 31. "I Like It," Cardi B feat. "Purple Hat," Sofi Tukker Electronic dance duo Sofi Tukker have never been afraid to have fun with their music, taking cues from global musical cultures to make tracks that are bold and party-ready. "Survivor," Destiny's Child A classic Destiny's Child banger, "Survivor" is the kind of workout song you need when you're getting close to reaching your limit. "Purple Hat," their 2019 hit, throws in some rock 'n' roll for a fresh take. 37. And with "get in the groove" as its refrain, it's right on theme for a workout, too. "I Win," Lethal Bizzle feat. 49. "Believer," Imagine Dragons Heavy drumbeats and a driving, anthemic chorus give this song its immediate pump-up power from rock show mainstays Imagine Dragons, led by their energetic frontman Dan Reynolds. 29. And certain songs, like Eminem's "Till I Collapse" (Spotify's most popular workout-related tune for four years in a row), Kanye West's "Stronger" and Survivor's perennial classic "Eye of the Tiger" remain favorites across the board. It was inescapable on the radio and in ads in 2017 for a reason, and was further boosted by a 2019 remix. Play it when you're hitting your stride. 34. Turn on the music and turn up your heart rate. 2. "What the hell are you waiting for?" is as good of a pump-up mantra as any, but it's the unusual mashup of Linkin Park's melodic punk and Jay's rapping that gives the song its staying power. Others — a Ricky Martin deep cut, some Brazilian baile funk and even a K-pop track — might be new surprises for the casual listener. And when it switches gears halfway through to feature rapper El Alfa, it only turns it into more of an intense track. 38. MNEK and Kianna Ledé For an uplifting boost while putting in the gym work, look to MNEK: a sought-after pop producer, his own work is anthemic in nature, often focused on self-empowerment. "War Paint," FLETCHER Viral 2015 hit "War Paint" is one of those soaring pop anthems that can't help but get people to their feet. "...Ready For It?," Taylor Swift Swift's 2017 self-referential album Reputation was filled with intensely anthemic pop: "...Ready For It?" has the biggest drop, the most hard-charging beat and the most soaring chorus, making it the best of the workout options. 1. "Bruised Not Broken," Matoma feat. 22. 10. The end result: a list of 50 of the songs that are best used for motivating you while working out — whatever the activity, from running to weight-lifting to getting in your crunches. (Also inspiring: the sharp choreography in the music video.) 39. 9. "Baby, how you feeling? From pop-punk to reggaeton balladry, his music spans sounds — but "La Romana" is the most hard-charging hit of the bunch, with a deeply satisfying rhythm. Motivation, indeed. Skepta British grime artist Lethal Bizzle's anthemic, confident "I Win" starts with punch and never lets up. It's hard not to want to move to its insistent beat. Vine oozes confidence over the pop-rap beat, making it perfect for soundtracking a workout. 48. 15. 7. "Higher Love," Kygo feat. Singing along to "I'm a survivor, I'm not gon' give up, I'm not gon' stop, I'm gon' work harder" is the ultimate boost. "On My Way," Tiësto feat. 42. 47. 16. "Level Up," Ciara What's more motivational than Ciara asking us to "level up"? Probably her music video for the track, which shows off Ciara's jaw-dropping dance moves — a motivating factor, to be sure. "Motivation," Normani Normani's breakout single "Motivation" does exactly what the song title suggests: works as a fun dance song with a catchy, motivating beat. Today, it's a workout soundtrack mainstay thanks to that dancefloor-ready beat and motivational energy. (Thanks, Rocky.) Don't fight it; assume your best all-or-nothing attitude as soon as the early strums start, and keep going. 21. Write to Raisa Bruner at raisa.bruner@time.com. It's also a perfect tune to work out to, as it turns out; Lizzo preaches a gospel of body positivity, making every line a celebration of exactly where you're at, not where you're going. Seven years later, the insistent buoyancy of the song holds up. DaBaby Camila Cabello has an instinct for wildly catchy Latin-inflected riffs: chart hits "Havana" and "Señorita" are proof of that. Ty Dolla Sign Fifth Harmony may have broken up, but "Work From Home" — their blockbuster hit as a group — is still one of the catchiest pop releases of the 2010s. 28. "BOP," DaBaby Rapper DaBaby was one of 2019's biggest breakout stars, a vivacious presence in whatever music he popped up in with a distinctive, fast-paced flow. 24. "Jungle," X Ambassadors feat. The thought behind the song works for any kind of workout, too: just keep going and put up with the situation and you'll get through it. French Montana Miley Cyrus' 2013 album Bangerz was an interesting experiment in genre mixing; there's country, EDM, pop and rap all wrapped up in one project. "Bring Em Out," T.I. Back in 2004, this was rapper T.I.'s big hit (thanks in no small part to a Jay-Z vocal sample that kicks things off). 3. It feels like the soundtrack of the best scene in an action movie; it should certainly do the trick at a workout. Whitney Houston put out her own cover in 1990, but with a limited release. The jazzy riffs and background snaps make it fun; the lyrics and vocal inflections make it memorable. The collaboration between Colombian reggaeton master J Balvin and Spanish pop artist Rosalía, known for her flamenco style, did just that. If positive self-talk were enough to get you through a workout, then "I Win" would be all you need to hit every goal. "Blood, Sweat & Tears" riffs off of a playground chant but ends up as a driving anthem that parallels the concept of working hard quite nicely. 11. "Trampoline," SHAED feat. 12. "La Romana," Bad Bunny feat. Thank you, Beyoncé, Kelly and Michelle. "Good As Hell," Lizzo Lizzo became TIME's Entertainer of the Year in 2019, but "Good as Hell" has been around since 2016: a soulful, uplifting song about realizing independence. 19. The result is a cheeky kiss-off over a gritty dubstep beat that's certain to get you moving. "My Oh My" is a little slower but just as effective, dark and brooding with its echoing chorus and her own intensity. It's a hit with attitude, perfect for leveling up a workout's intensity. 44. The song is fast-paced and perfectly timed for a workout; even better, it also kicked off a viral challenge that was about not only dancing but also figuring out ways to "level up" in your own life. "Jumpin' Jumpin'," Destiny's Child "Ladies leave your man at home," the women of Destiny's Child told us smartly all the way back in 1999, "because it's 11:30 and the club is jumpin, jumpin." It was a hype song then, and it holds up twenty years later. And it is technically about "working," which makes it even better for a workout. Work out at your own risk. "Sicko Mode," Travis Scott Travis Scott's "Sicko Mode" is the rapper at his slickest; it also became his first Hot 100 number-one in 2018. 8. But the hollow, insistent drumbeat of Sheeran and Bieber's 2019 collaboration will get under your skin; there's a reason Sheeran (remains) a chart mainstay. Intense from the get-go, there's something about the directness of its bassline that resonates no matter what. "Stronger," Kanye West One of only a handful of songs that speak directly to the physical experience of working out, West's seminal hit "Stronger" was born to soundtrack the hardest parts of EDM, there's a little bit of everything. "POWER," Kanye West West's 2010 album My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy has long been a fan favorite. 40. 17. It became a Billboard hit again just last year, and one of Spotify's most popular workout tracks, when Norwegian DJ Kygo gave it a tropical house spin in a production that chops up the spiritually-attuned song into a club-ready dance tune. "Don't Start Now," Dua Lipa Dua Lipa made a name for herself with juicy, often-empowering pop in 2017; her return in 2019 was kicked off with the forward-thinking, bouncy disco vibe of "Don't Start Now," a song that manages to be both delightfully independent in its message and club- or gym-ready in its beat. 13. Plus, as it blends to its big chorus, it's impossible not to find the beat of whatever you're doing. "Dance Monkey," Tones and I Australia's Tones and I broke through in 2019 with the debut viral hit "Dance Monkey," a deeply infectious pop ballad with a catchy chorus that won't quit. These are the 50 best workout songs. "Wake Me Up," Avicii When Swedish DJ Avicii blended together a country melody and Aloe Blacc's gruff, soulful vocals with his own bulletproof talent for EDM drops back in 2013, he was pioneering a new course for electronic music — and crafted a magically compelling hit. Jamie N Commons The last decade's update to Queen's "We Will Rock You" came in the form of "Jungle" from rock band X Ambassadors and soul singer Jamie N Commons: a hand-clap, foot-stomping, bluesy song with searing guitar and reverberating intensity. "No New Friends," LSD LSD is the supergroup consisting of pop mastermind Sia, hitmaking DJ Diplo and producer-singer Labrinth; with that DNA, their collaborative work was always destined to basically be a series of pure bangers. 45. "Con Altura," Rosalía and J Balvin feat. Feeling good as hell! works as one of the most joyful affirmations in recent pop history, and made its way up the Billboard charts in 2019 upon its re-release as a single. "Numb/Encore," Linkin Park feat. "God Is a Dancer," Tiësto and Mabel English singer Mabel brings soulful vocals to this fast-paced electronic track from Dutch DJ and producer Tiësto. "Vossi Bop," Stormzy British grime star Stormzy is known for charisma in his music. (Drake would later beat it with "One Dance.") But its catchy mix of a stretchy beat and Swedish singer MØ's emphatic vocals keep it in heavy rotation as a motivational song for the ages. J Balvin and Bad Bunny Arguably 2018's song of the summer, "I Like It" is festive and fun-loving, thanks in part to its immediately memorable boogaloo beat, the contributions of fellow Latin stars J Balvin and Bad Bunny and Cardi B's singalong-ready chorus. Naturally, that makes it a good fit for a workout (or a dance party). In other words, it's a great jam for hitting the gym with. It doesn't hurt that the accompanying music video shows the former Fifth Harmony singer and Dancing with the Stars favorite breaking it down with some seriously impressive moves. 6. "Paint It Black," Rolling Stones The ultimate Rolling Stones song, "Paint It Black" starts with that meandering, hypnotic intro before building into a fiery rock 'n' roll hit with a steady beat that's great for pounding pavement when you need to keep the tempo up. Jay-Z This 2004 cross-genre collaboration between rock band Linkin Park and rapper Jay-Z has stood up to the test of time as a tried-and-true workout hit. 30. 43. 41. "On the Ball," Bryce Vine Breezy and bright with a surf-rock vibe, Bryce Vine's "On the Ball" is exactly what it says it is: a celebration of being on top of things. "Work B-tch" reminds you that if "you want a hot body?" there's only one way to get there: work... hard work. On "FU" with rapper French Montana she holds nothing back. Steve Aoki's remix adds extra oomph to a song that already hit hard. 23. 26. "Keep that pace... take it step by step," Mabel sings, appropriately for any workout: its consistency makes it an ideal jam for the gym. When the going gets hard, Eminem is here to take you through to the finish line — whatever the workout, whatever the challenge. Rag'n'Bone Man "I am giant, stand up on my shoulders, tell me what you see" — that's the uplifting refrain in Scottish DJ Calvin Harris's latest hit, backgrounded by bold horns and a soulful beat. El Guincho "Con Altura" takes its name from a radio personality's catchphrase, suggesting taking something to a new level. "No New Friends" from their 2019 group project is big, bold pop with heavy percussion and a melodic chorus: an ace for workout pump-ups. "Lean On," Major Lazer, MØ and DJ Snake After its release in 2015, the EDM-moombahton track "Lean On" became Spotify's most-streamed song in the world. Indie pop trio SHAED started things off and tapped Zayn for a later remix of their viral hit; the result is a dance-pop track that's heavy on the down-beat, spare with its production choices and intense with its focus. El Alfa When Puerto Rico's Bad Bunny surprise-released an album on Christmas of 2018, it was the ultimate gift for fans. That would be "Rock It," from French DJ duo Ofenbach. It's bright and layered, just distracting enough to keep you interested but insistent enough to help you keep the pace. 50. Based on a handclap beat and cheerleading-style shouts, it's a workout stalwart. 18. What Cyrus brings to everything is her signature personality and bold vocals. Justin Bieber "We at a party we don't want to be at" is not a particularly inspiring sentiment, true. 36.
